MALAYSIAN AGRIS DATABASE

Malaysian AGRIS is a database that contains bibliographic records of agricultural science and technology, including forestry, animal husbandry, fisheries, food science and environmental science; covering the geography, history, education, information development, economics, sociology, engineering and other related fields. The materials indexed in this database consists of journal articles, books, book chapters, monographs and conference papers published in Malaysia.

Beginning in April 1979, Perpustakaan Sultan Abdul Samad, UPM has been appointed as the National Center of AGRIS and responsible for collecting and documenting material in the field of agricultural science and technology in Malaysia and becomes a data provider to the FAO AGRIS database.

Title: Process development with bifunctional chiral epoxides to access single enantiomers of pharmaceutical intermediates

Authors: Masaya Ikunaka
Takeshi Sugai

Issue Date: 2007

Publisher: Malaysian Palm oil Board

Citation: Proceedings of Oleo & Specialty Chemicals Conference : PIPOC 2007 ; palm oil : empowering change.: Kuala Lumpur, 2007, p. 88-114

Abstract: Two selected case studies on process development will be discussed: one is on the enantiocontrolled synthesis of (S)-J-hydroxytetradecanoic acid (2), an intermediate of ONO-4007 (J) possessing anti tumor activity, which employs terminally differentiated double homologation on (S)-epichlorohydrin (ECH) (Ib). The other is on the enantioselective access to N-4-cyano-3-trifluoromethylphenyl (S)-2,3-dihydroxy-2-methylpropanamide (5a), an intermediate of (R)-bicalutamide (5b) exhibiting potent anti androgen activity, which starts with enantioconvergent preparation of (R)-J-benzyloxy-2-methylpropane-1, 2-diol (4) from O-benzyl (±)-2-methylglycidol (Ie) by the enantiocomplementary hydrolysis using Bacillus subtilis epoxide hydrolase (BSEH) and H2SO4 in sequence. In each case study, emphasis will be placed on how to select viable synthetic routes on the basis of availability of single enantiomers of chiral starting materials and preparative methods thereof. In the chemoenzymatic synthesis of (S)-5a, BSEH indispensable for building its quaternary stereogenic center is developed in scratch, which culminates in successful over expression of its gene jiOm B. subtilis JCA110629 under the influence of an amylase promoter and terminator of B. subtilis NBRC 15535 in an engineered strain of B. subtilis A11:2 deficient in neutral protease.

could be 1Mtpa. Similarly three world scale fatty alcohols plants are being invested, with at least six smaller local alcohols plants so that by end 2008, fatty alcohols capacity could be over 500Ktpa. Corresponding investments in downstream manufacturing continues to grow in the area of surfactants and fatty amines & derivatives. With its large population and its rapidly growing demand for oleochemicals in Home & Personal Care markets, plus its industrial markets, it is expected that China will absorb much of this new oleochemicals production. The opportunity for China to become an oleochemicals exporter is more likely for derivatives notably fatty amines and possibly fatty alcohols and surfactants.

stimulation agent within 10,000, 20,000 and 30,000 ppm salinity, the inter facial tension between oil and water was reduced to 10-4 dyne cm-1. The total oil recovery with a 0.5 % concentration of palm oil-based MES stimulation agent was about 88 until 93.75%. However, the total oil recovery increased in the range of 90 to 98.88% by the injection of 1% palm oil-based MES stimulation agent into the core. Based on the results, palm oil-based MES surfactant can be effectively used as stimulation agent in real reservoir.
